AFTER YOUR MASTER

ALUMNI NETWORK

Your entry into the POLIMI Graduate School of Management and Accademia Teatro alla Scala communities begins upon your arrival and continues after your graduation, when you join the POLIMI GSoM alumni network, which has over 20,000 graduates, and the larger Politecnico di Milano community, with more than 210,000 members, including over 35,000 graduates from the School of Management, as well as the Accademia Teatro alla Scala alumni network.

The School's Alumni Engagement Team is constantly working to provide the entire community of former students with opportunities for meeting and exchanging their skills and experience. All this is with a view to feeding and nurturing a cohesive community: a successful career is, in fact, the result of a unique fusion of exceptional skills and expertise, as well as constant professional development and a network of valuable, high-quality contacts, which is built precisely through being part of the community.

Community engagement is based on three main pillars, which are: shaping purposeful careers, leading through connections and igniting the future. As for the first of these, the School partners with our alumni through professional and personal development programmes designed for all those who aspire to be Purposeful Innovators and to generate a positive impact on society. The services include the Purposeful Coaching path, aimed at supporting alumni in building meaningful careers guided by a clear and defined Purpose, and the Professional Development – Training Catalogue, dedicated to strengthening the knowledge and the application of career management skills useful for building sustainable careers.

Alumni La Scala was formed so that this heritage of experiences and knowledge can be strengthened and expanded through constant new input. The majority of the content are organized into specific sections, allowing the alumni to continue their professional growth and stay abreast of the latest developments: job opportunities (job platform), professional and personal exchange (networking), invitations to exclusive events (events), exclusive learning opportunities (lifelong learning), mentoring for the youngest alumni by acclaimed former students (mentorship), and a section where they can present their own projects to the community (incubator).

The platform is also open to companies and institutions involved in cultural promotion, the performing arts, advertising, or events. These include not only those having longstanding collaborative relationships with the Academy, but also the many different organizations looking for professional figures with a solid background in culture and the performing arts, a guarantee offered by the La Scala Academy. Companies and institutions can post job offers and promote their events and projects in a specifically dedicated section. These are additional opportunities for encounters within the community and for bringing new vitality and dynamism to Alumni Accademia La Scala.

As for the second, our Alumni Clubs – which you will be able to join – should be mentioned. Created to bring together people who share an interest or a professional goal, they allow alumni – and also students – to meet, share experiences and stay in contact with the School. Each of our Clubs – Business & Digital Transformation, Consulting, Corporate Innovation, Entrepreneurship, Finance Innovation, Football, Healthcare & Life Sciences, LeadHERship – Empowering Women in Business, MBA, Project Management, Sailing, Supply Chain Management & Logistics and Wine Tech – creates a strong sense of belonging. Finally, let's not forget Shape the Future, the Global Alumni Conference organised by and for the Alumni Community to celebrate the accomplishments that shape the future of innovation, entrepreneurship and sustainability.

Moreover, you'll also be able to subscribe, both online and via app, to ALUMNI Accademia La Scala: a lively, dynamic space that hosts a community of young talents who have entrusted their futures to one of Europe's leading educational institutes in the performing arts. Pursuing their studies at the same institute, Academy alumni have shared unique experiences in the classrooms, behind the scenes, and on stage at Teatro alla Scala, learning, assimilating and mastering a particular way of living and doing theatre. They are young people who have nurtured their passion through hard work and determination, transforming it into a profession. Now, backed by a wealth of skills, competencies, and knowledge, they have become true maestri of the La Scala method, its ambassadors to the world.

ALUMNI TESTIMONIALS

FEDERICA PALUMBO

The coursework

Attending the Master in Performing Arts Management at Accademia Teatro alla Scala was a key step in my journey. It served as a bridge between my academic background and my professional life in the performing arts sector. Most importantly, it made me believe that my vision “building a career in the arts with a legal and managerial foundation” was not only possible, but concrete and achievable.

The structure of the program gave me a comprehensive understanding of how a cultural institution functions, across all departments. This 360-degree perspective was essential: regardless of the specific path I would eventually choose, I felt equipped with the knowledge to understand the overall governance and daily dynamics of a performing arts organization.

A defining aspect of the Master was its international scope. Learning from professors and professionals from all over the world helped me develop a global perspective on cultural management and understand how institutions operate beyond national borders.

Lastly, the real added value was the human network. The friendships and professional connections I built during the program became an immediate gateway into an international network of peers and professionals, fostering both personal and career growth.

The final part of this journey was my internship at Teatro alla Scala. It was the perfect culmination of my studies, the opportunity to apply everything I had learned in a world-renowned institution. This experience not only reinforced my skills but also prepared me in the most concrete way for my transition into the professional I am today.

VIRGINIA ESPOSITO

The class

The class composition is one of the biggest strengths of this master. The international and diverse nature of MPAM, allows students to work closely within heterogeneous groups and hence become comfortable with the many challenges that can occur when first starting to work with new peers. The courses are structured so that a large amount of the work is done in groups. Such structure prepares you to become flexible, adaptable and to learn how to efficiently work in teams, skills that are of key importance when beginning to interface with the labour market.

Being able to work with your master's colleagues is also of key importance since it allows to create a united and solid classroom! Moreover, the various trips that will be organized throughout the duration of the master will give you the chance of forming incredible memories and friendships, while gaining some exclusive insights on the performing arts world. All of these aspects will contribute in making your MPAM experience special and will allow you to grow as an individual and head towards your future career confident of your practical knowledge and of the friendships you've built.

KYOKA TAIRA

Internship, Production Department at Teatro alla Scala

My five months as an intern in the Production Office at Teatro alla Scala truly felt like a dream come true. I had originally planned to study abroad during university, but the COVID-19 pandemic made that impossible. Still, I could not let go of my desire to go to Italy. After extensive searching, I finally discovered the MPAM program at the Accademia Teatro alla Scala.

Among the many courses I took at the Accademia, I was especially drawn to those focused on production. At La Scala's Production Office, I witnessed an extraordinary range of professionals working together—technical directors, stage directors and assistant directors, casting coordinators, members of the chorus and orchestra, as well as directors, conductors, singers, and ballet dancers from all over the world. Experiencing this environment firsthand made it clear how broad and multifaceted the responsibilities of the Production Office are, and how essential the department is in uniting all the elements that bring opera and ballet productions to life.

Working in the Production Office means encountering many unexpected situations on a daily basis. Resolving these issues, I found, can be especially challenging—particularly in the Italian workplace culture, where individual freedom is valued more highly than group harmony, in contrast to the more consensus-oriented environment in Japan.

Through this internship, I came to deeply appreciate the joy and fulfillment of working in a theater. At the same time, I learned that the ability to adapt flexibly to ever-changing situations is absolutely essential. A theater functions through the dedicated efforts of many professionals, and it is thanks to their work that extraordinary performances are brought to life every day. Becoming part of that collective effort has been a deeply inspiring experience—and now, being involved once again with Teatro alla Scala has become my new dream.

CHRISTINA GRIGORIADOU

Internship, Metropolitan Opera House, New York City

As part of my Master's in Performing Arts Management at the Accademia Teatro alla Scala, I had the opportunity to complete a year-long internship at the Metropolitan Opera in New York — an experience that proved deeply formative, both personally and professionally.

As a Marketing Intern, I contributed to sales analysis and reporting, supported audience development initiatives, and participated in internal meetings that revealed the complexity of strategic planning in a major international institution. I was encouraged to take initiative, explore the areas I was most passionate about, and connect theory with practice on a daily basis. The responsibilities I was entrusted with allowed me to make a meaningful contribution while gaining a deep understanding of how a world-renowned cultural institution operates behind the scenes.

What truly defined this journey was the people. My supervisors and colleagues were generous, supportive, and sincerely invested in my growth. Many became mentors — and some, lasting friends. Their trust, openness, and collaborative spirit helped me develop confidence and sharpen my professional instincts. The conversations and insights I shared with them played a central role in shaping the focus of my thesis and my future career goals.

Living and working in New York challenged me and expanded my perspective. It pushed me out of my comfort zone and deepened my understanding of the performing arts on an international scale.

This internship was more than a learning opportunity — it was a turning point. It strengthened my skills, clarified my path, and reaffirmed my commitment to working in the arts with professionalism, empathy, and purpose.
